BIOGRAPHY

Catherine brings experience in complex civil litigation, constitutional matters, business law, and construction law to her practice. Before entering private practice, Catherine served as a Judicial Fellow with the North Carolina Administrative Office of the Courts, where she worked with District and Superior Court judges across North Carolina on a wide range of matters, including complex civil cases and constitutional challenges.

Catherine also served as a Legislative Fellow with the North Carolina General Assembly, assisting legislators with research and drafting related to proposed legislation. Her experience working within both the judicial and legislative branches gives her a broad perspective on the legal and governmental issues that can affect her clients.
